

WOMEN RELIGIOUS HISTORY SOURCES:
A DIGITAL GUIDE TO REPOSITORIES IN NORTH AMERICA

December 2018

FOREWORD AND ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This initiative intends to provide scholars with an update to the last comprehensive resource on Women Religious Archives, Women Religious History Sources: A Guide to Repositories in the United States, edited by Evangeline Thomas, CSJ, and published in 1983. In the Fate of Religious Orders Archives Conference, held at Catholic University on March 29, 2017, Prof. Carol K. Coburn of Avila University noted the importance of the 1983 resource to scholars to this day in conducting research. She challenged and encouraged archivists to return to the project by compiling a revised edition and members of the ACWR board in attendance felt this directly aligned with our organization's mission. The Catholic Research Resource Alliance (CRRRA) has graciously offered us a digital platform to share this resource with scholars, teachers, and the public at large.

Scholars, please note that the geographical location of the archives listed in the directory does not necessarily limit its scope to that city and/or state. Inquire about the full scope of the collection utilizing the Contact information field in the directory entries.

This directory will be updated regularly as submissions are received. If your community collection is currently not included in this edition, please consider filling out the template below and return the completed information to the ACWR National Office at archivistsacwr@gmail.com.

- holdings: 345 linear feet. Date Span: 1840s to the present.
- scope: The archives holds the official provincial records of the former California province from 1844-2014. We also have copies of the foundresses and the early Mother Generals that were copied for the use of the missionary sisters leaving Namur for America. As part of these records, there are some records from the Guatemalan missions which came with the Sisters after the Government of Guatemala expelled all religious orders from the country in 1875. The record types include correspondence, financial ledgers and reports, property records, statistical convent, province and school reports, and formation documentation. There are records from individual convents attached to various schools, deceased and former sisters' files and individual sisters' manuscript collections. These records include personal letters, ministry records, research work, MA and PhD theses, art photography as well as personal and travel photo albums, artwork in all media formats and artifacts related to ministries.

- telephone: 415-751-0406
- hours: Tuesday, Wednesday, & Thursday 9:00 AM - 5:00 PM Pacific Time
- access: Open with some restrictions; please contact the archives for further information
- holdings: Approximately 907.5 linear feet of documents, 1860 volumes, 1100 films, videos and sound recordings, 24, 000 photographs, 710 architectural drawings, and numerous artifacts, ephemera, clothing and textiles.
- scope: The collections document the history of the sisters' collective and individual lives from their arrival in San Francisco in 1854 through the changes to community life and ministries that followed the edicts of the Second Vatican Council in the 1960s through the challenges they are currently facing with regards to surging retirement and health care costs and decreasing membership. Inherent in that history is the impact their actions and lives have had on the people and communities they have served. As a result, the collections also document many of the important events and social/cultural movements that are fundamental to the overall history of San Francisco and all of California through the lens of otherwise underrepresented and marginalized populations and groups. Highlighted collections include: • First-hand accounts and photographs of the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and its aftermath, including relief works (1906-1912) • Administrative records, correspondence, first-hand accounts, publications, photographs, ephemera, and audio-visual materials documenting the long-term involvement of the sisters in a variety of social justice and equality movements (1857 - present) • Administration and Governance records, including minutes of General Councils, Chapters, and various committees (1855 - present) • Annals (1854-2010) • Books of Religious Profession and Postulancy (1854 - present) • Chronicle of Ministry Assignments and Directories (1949 - present) • Living, deceased, and former members' files (1854 - present) • Oral histories (1970s - present) • Missions in Latin America (1965 - present)

- holdings: approximately 635 linear feet. Includes papers of major superiors, rules, customs, annals of the congregation, formation and financial records and papers of deceased sisters; also administrative records of minutes of general councils and chapter assemblies and various committees and diocesan records pertinent to the congregation. Records of institutions with which the sisters have been associated. Collection of photographs, audio tapes, scrapbooks, theses, publications, and artifacts document the history of the congregation. Papers of Mother de Chantal Keating (1833-1917) contain materials pertaining to her role as army nurse at Wheeling Hospital, West Virginia, during the Civil War, when she was general superior of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Wheeling (1864-1876). Her correspondence includes a letter from Theodore Roosevelt in 1898. Files include other notable Sisters such as Sister Christine Mulready, activist; Sister Elizabeth Johnson, theologian; Sister Tesa Fitzgerald, advocate for incarcerated women and their children.

- scope: From congregation founded by Jean Pierre Médaille, SJ, in Le Puy, France, in 1650; first American congregation established at Carondelet (Saint Louis) Missouri, in 1836 from Lyons, France. In 1856, three Sisters established a congregation in Brooklyn, New York; one came from the Philadelphia congregation; another from Philadelphia via Canandaigua, New York; and the third from Saint Louis via Canandaigua. In 1903, the motherhouse was moved to its present location, and the sisters are now identified as the Sisters of Saint Joseph of Brentwood. Focus is education on all levels; the sisters also ran hospitals, cared for children in five orphanages, administered schools for the deaf. Newer forms of ministry include religious and adult education, prison ministry (including Providence Houses), child care, pastoral ministry and a wide variety of social services. Individual sisters have worked with migrants, the people of Appalachia, and Latin America. Since 1930, the sisters have conducted schools in Puerto Rico. Total membership since 1856: 3,375; present: 465.
